

January wind and ice can be brutal to the electric system, and dangerous for those who work on it. If you have an outage, please be patient. Help is on the way. Line personnel who try to rush outage restoration could make costly mistakes that might hurt them, their co-workers and co-op members, or worse. Working steadily and deliberately means everyone goes home safely each night.

For more information about power outages and electrical safety, contact your local Touchstone Energy cooperative.

